TWO PLAYERS REPORT

McFarland and Heydon Join the Senators.

Denied That $2,500 Was Given for Casev and Farrell.

Pitcher McFarland and Catcher Heydon reported to Manager Irwin at National Park this morning and immediately donned uniforms and joined the other Senators at morning practice. Both men are in good form and look to be ball players all over. Cassidy, whose home is in Wilmington, Del., ran down to that place last evening from ran down to that place last evening from Philadelphia for a short visit, but will report to Manager Irwin in time to go into today's game.

The report from New York that $2,500 was given to the Washington club, in addition to the three players, for Farrell and Casey, was laughed at this morning by Messrs. Wagner and Irwin. Local enthu-Messrs. Wagner and Irwin. Local enthuslasts doubtless believe that Farrell was the man Manager Hanlon was after, while in reality it was little Casey, whom he wanted to fill in at third until Shortstop Jennings is fit to play and Dahlen can return to the third corner. Manager Irwin says he talked for two hours last week with Manager Hanlon, trying to persuade him to help out the Washington club with a pitch-er, and at that time the Brooklyn man er, and at that time the Brooklyn man stopped all talk by insisting on Casey being considered in the trade. Later Manager Irwin concluded that he needed other men that would be more valuable to the club than the little third baseman, and this decision took him to Philadelphia on Saturday. When Manager Hanlon found the Washington manager willing to let Casey go, he quickly came to terms and the trade was consummated.

Feeling of Local Patrons. Notwithstanding the lack of base ball inerest in Washington, due entirely to the poor work of the Washington team, there is considerable curiosity among local fans to see the result of the Hanlon-Wagner deal. It is the general belief that any change could not be a disadvantageous one change could not be a disadvantageous one to the home club. There is no thirteenth place in the league, and no team could very well do any poorer work than has been shown at National Park. Without any money consideration the trade looks on its face as a fair one for both sides. Brooklyn was in sore need of a catcher and had face as a fair one for both sides. Brook-lyn was in sore need of a catcher and had a surplus of pitchers, and Washington did not need the services of both Farrell and McGuire, so the trade of a pitcher for a catcher looks all right. Cassidy, the new infielder, has been doing good batting and poor fielding for Brooklyn, while Casey, the man Hanlon gets for third base, has neither fielded nor batted like a lengue ball player. He may do well with the superbas. He may do well with the superbas, had done nothing for Washington. and there was small charice of his improv ing, as the crowds, or rather the few faithful spectators, were down on him. It is natural for the New York people to make it appear that they have secured a jewel in Casey, but when they state that Mr. in Casey, but when they start, the three Wagner received $2,500 bonus with the three players they are casting reflections on Man-ager Hanlon's base ball sense, and also Mr. Wagner's judgment. The latter magnate adage of the game would be the signal for osing the gates at National Park. Mr. Wagner emphatically denies that there was any money consideration in the deal. He says that he traded Farrell and Casey for Heydon, McFarland and Cassidy.

Release of Killen. Manager Irwin this morning served the isual ten days' notice of release to Pitcher Frank Killen, and he is at liberty to sign with any club in the league. Manager irwin claims that Killen has not been in good form this spring, his great speed being missing, and that the club cannot afford to carry him until he gets into first-class shape for work.

ANOTHER DEFEAT.

Washington Again Loses to the Boston Team.

The Washington "fans" will breathe easier now that the Boston club has left the city, and hope for better things from oday on. The Senators played their last game of the first series with the Beaneaters yesterday, and the same old tale has to be told-dire defeat, the score being 10 to 1 in the visitors' favor. Dunkle did the twirling for the home club, and was easy from the start, besides hurting his own battle through bases on balls. Coupled with the hard hitting were sandwiched several misplays, and the Bostons easily obtained a commanding lead and were never headed. Klobedanz was on the rubber for the visiting club and proved effective, although lucky in the matter of several drives by the locals going directly into the hands of the opposing players,

Shortstop Herman Long and Third Baseman Jimmy Coilins were once more the bright luminaries of the Boston outfit. From the work done yesterday by this couple it appears that all they desire is to get a hand on the ball, no matter what position they may be in, and they will make the play in finished style. Covering acres of ground is the long suit of both of these players, and being coupled up with a quick recovery and wonderful throwing. quick recovery and wonderful throwing ability, put-outs and assists are registered that appear among the impossibilities. Harry Davis' hard drive yesterday at Long must be taken as an exception, but there is little question that the Boston shortstop prevented a three bagger when he tried to stop the ball, his hands being twisted apart through the contact. The Senators are in the doldrums, and until they recover confidence in themselves victories will be few and far between. Of coarse the Bostons are playing perfect ball, and the team to compare favorably with them must be doing something sensational in the fielding and batting line. As the Senators have not yet struck their stride they, of course, failed in the sensational line and were made to appear in a very un-favorable light. With the Bostons out of avorable light. With the Bostons out of he way and confronted with a club hav-ng troubles of their own, the locals may be better, and it is to be hoped they will. The season is early yet, and there is plenty of time for rallying play. Following is the score of yesterday's game:

PLAYING SHORT SUITS.

Foster Explains the Fundamental Principles in the Game. R. F. Foster, the leading exponent of the short-suit game in whist, has finally made known his theory of the game. Its fundamental principles he described as follows in a recent number of the New York Sun: "There are still, unfortunately, very few persons who thoroughly understand the fundamental principles of the so-called short-suit game. They do not realize that it is primarily a defensive game, in which the real strength of the hand is reserved until the time is ripe for its proper use. In the long-suit game, on the contrary, the attack is the distinguishing feature, and the strongest and best suit is played for right from the start. Now, if a player starts out with a defensive lead he is usually trying to defend something, and it is the duty of his partner to find out what that is and to help along the scheme of defense if he can.

"One of the worst faults among would-be short-suiters is that they fail to consider the reasons which have probably prompted short-sulters is that they fail to consider the reasons which have probably prompted the original leader to open a sult in which he is weak. Why does he not open the sult in which he has at least length? Is it because it contains a tenace? The cards played by others or held by the partner will often show that there can be no tenace combination in his hand. Perhaps it is headed by a single honor. If so, what is that honor and can you save it? Perhaps he is in the high grass with a lot of trumps. If so, are they any use to you as a support to are they any use to you as a support to your hand?

the lead again and compelling him to do the very thing which he tried to avoid in the first place, open a suit which he did not want to lead away from. Time and again we see persons who imagine they are playing the common-sense game jump at the chance to force their partners without stop-ping to think what suit that unfortunate partner will lead next and what chance they have to win a trick in it.

"If the general principle governing short-suit leads is that they are defensive because they are made in order to avoid leading other and perhaps better suits, the proper support to those defensive openings must be for the third hand, if he gets in on the first suit opened, to lead his own short or supporting suits, in order to give his partner the benefit of the position and the warning as to which suit of the two unplayed suits to protect.

"Those who do not possess sufficient skill as natural card players to think out situa-tions should never meddle with the shortsuit game. They will not gain more tricks by sticking to long suits, but they will lose fewer. The number of tricks that are given away by would-be short-suiters through their ignorance of fundamental principles and their consequent improper management of the ordinary run of hands is something astonishing. These tricks are usually presented to some steady-going, old long-suit players, who set up a great crow at the end of the game because they are high score, perhaps six plus, sixteen of which are gifts from would-be short-suiters."

A Chance to See Schaefer Play. The world-famous billiardist, Jacob will arrive in Washington tomorrow, and the evening, with Frank Harrison, the western expert, give a free exhibition at the rooms of Michael Scanlon, on 9th street. Mr. Schaefer is in fine form and the exhibitions which he has been giving have attracted great attention in the cities have attracted. School and I were are the exhibitions which he has been giving have attracted great attention in the cities he has visited. Schaefer and Ives are matched for a $5,000 contest in the near future, and the present tour is taken be-fore entering upon a course of practice training.

GRAIN-O BRINGS RELIEF

To the coffee drinser. Coffee drinking is a held that is universally indulged in and almost as universally injurious. Have you tried Grain-O? It is almost like coffee, but the effects are just the oposite. Coffee upsets the stomach, ruins the digestion, affects the heart and disturbs the whole nervous system. Grain-O tones up the stomach, aided digestion and strengthens the nervous system. Grain-O tones up the stomach, is nothing but nourishment in Grain-O. It continues the otherwise.
